Overview

Recently, there have been significant improvements in the economic outcomes of Aboriginal Canadians. Labour force participation, self-employment and earned income have all increased significantly. Private investment is increasing in every region of the country and there is a demonstrable interest on the part of the non-Aboriginal private sector to work with Aboriginal businesses and communities.

Field Law has a wide-range of experience in aboriginal law and economic development initiatives, including:

- Corporations
- Joint ventures
- Limited partnerships and trusts
- Related tax issues.
