Overview

Field Law's Professional Regulatory lawyers serve as independent legal counsel to a number of tribunals and committees. Legal processes are complex but professional regulatory tribunals and committees are required to apply the law fairly and properly. They are also often required to provide detailed written reasons for their decisions. This can be a daunting task for volunteer members of the profession.

Our lawyers provide support to professional regulatory tribunals and committees both during and after a hearing, assisting them to identify all of the important issues, to properly deal with evidence, to make well-reasoned and defensible decisions and to provide detailed written reasons for the tribunal or committees' decisions.

Contact us to discuss how we might assist your organization's regulatory tribunals or committees to carry out their mandates in the public interest.
